Identification

My name is Martin Roe Eidhammer. I am the host of the blog “Norwegian genealogy and then some” (See “About me” and “Contact page” for further information). I am situated in Norway, as is the server hosting my blog. I make my living working full time as a certified psychiatric nurse. No matter what other formal education I might have, I write this blog as an amateur. My writing should not be considered as scholarly (Norwegian: faglitterær).

I take great care and pride in writing as accurately and correct as I can. You should still exercise the same scrutiny with my material as you should do with any other information you find on the internet.

Observing copyrights on authored sources

When I write things based on authored sources, I will cite these in a scholarly manner and use these sources as proper conduct (Norwegian: God skikk) calls for.

I will exercise my right, under the freedom of speech, to write, as proper conduct calls for, about common known, experienced, or easily observable facts on any topic pertaining to Norway, Norwegian culture, traditions, history and sources, no matter who might have written about this before.

Copyrights

The content of this blog is copyrighted by me. I am, of course, happy if you link to the content of my blog. If you want to use the content in your own blog/magazine/website etc., just send me a word and I am sure we'll be able to reach an agreement.

Copyrights on pictures/illustrations in this blog

I use pictures in my blog from various sources:

- As I am an avid photographer, many of the pictures presented are my own. I have not placed a copyright notice on all of them as I consider them to be covered by the “all rights reserved” notice in the footer of this blog. If you want to use any of my pictures, please send me a word. I have not yet to refuse any request for use.
- A number of the illustrations are from the free online service Pixabay <https://pixabay.com/> No attribution is needed when using these. I do, from time to time pay a small amount of money to support this service.
- I have obtained a general permission to use screengrabs/making videos from Dis-Norge and Digitalarkivet's websites. You are, of course, free to make the exact same screengrabs and edit them in a similar way. If you want to use a screengrab from my blog that I have edited (added arrows, boxes highlights or whatever), I would appreciate if you would send me a word.
- Some of the pictures are presented under a Creative Commons license and are attributed as such. See: <http://creativecommons.org/>

- All other pictures should have an attribution to the photographer or the person/institution that owns, and have given me the permission to display, the picture.

Advertisements

I get a small amount of money from advertisements displayed/clicked on in my blog:

- Google AdSense. These ads are presented on most pages of my blog. I have very limited impact on what specific ads that are presented. I have opted out of ads from some business-categories such as gambling and adult content. I seem to fight a losing battle on dating ads. No matter what ads might be displayed, the product/service they promote is not to be considered endorsed by me.
- Amazon. I put in an occasional link to products sold by Amazon. This is done when I think the product is relevant to the content of the blogpost. If this is for a product I have used/book I have read, it will be obvious based on the content of the blogpost. Unless this is obvious, the placement of the add is merely a suggestion, and no further endorsement is implied.

Other products/services mentioned in my blog

I do from time to time mention other products/services in my blogposts. This is done when I think this is relevant to the content of the blogpost or useful for the genealogist. I generate no income from this. I will, in the blogpost, clearly state if this is a product/service that I have used. If not, no endorsement should be implied unless I make a recommendation in the blogpost.

My non-profit profile

In spite of my money generating ads, comparing the earnings I have had, with my expenses for domain, server rent and internet access, makes any sane book-keeper break out in tears. This blog is well and truly a non-profit project.

Use of email addresses

I will not share your email address with third parties. If you supply your email address, to sign up for a newsletter or in a comment form, the email address will only be used for that specific purpose.

You will not receive newsletters or other mailings unless you sign up. If you sign up for a newsletter, you can unsubscribe at any time by following the unsubscribe link at the bottom of each newsletter.

The email address you leave in the comment or contact form will only be used to contact you about that specific question or comment. If your question could be referred to someone else, you will be notified so you can make contact yourself.

Genealogical information about living people

To protect the privacy of living people, this website will not publish information about people who may still be alive unless they have given permission. This includes anybody born less than 100 years ago for whom it is unknown if they died.

Please refrain from including information about living people in comments, as these comments will be edited before approval, or deleted.
